Measure, Outlined to Prevent Speculation, Would Give City Control

Dependents of Philadelphia men joining the colors, whatever may be the branch in which they enlist, will be amply cared for in the way of insurance, according to pro-visions of a bill introduced in Councils this

The bill was first introduced in Select Council by Councilman Walsh, of the Thirty-eighth Ward. It was quickly passed and sent to Common Council. The bill provides for the naming of a committee of three members from each branch to investigate insurance rates, and the findings of this inquiry will be the basis for prompt action.

It was also agreed that employes of the ty who enlist shall receive the difference between the salary given by the city and that paid by the Government. Mayor Smith indorsed these plans and said that positions of city employes would be held open for them until after the war.

Food speculators will be outlawed by another bill reported as a war measure. It provides for the naming of a committee to prepare for taking over the food markets of necessary or directing the handling of the problem in such a way that prices cannot be boosted in an emergency.

FEEBLE-MINDED BOY RAISED TO NORMAL

Dr. Lightner Witmer Gives Remarkable Demonstration Before Philosophical Society

A remarkable demonstration of the effects of training a deficient child, which drew the hearty applause of some of the most astute and gray-haired thinkers of the United States, was given this afternoon at the opening session of the general meeting of the American Philosophical Society at the headquarters in Independence Square, by Dr. Lightner, Witmen, directors of the by Dr. Lightner Witmer, director of the Psychological Laboratory at the University of Pennsylvania.

To illustrate his address on "The Diagmostic Method of Training Intelligence: An Education for the Fortunate Few," Doctor Witmer presented a boy, three years and nine months old, who fourteen months ago, when Doctor Witmer took him in training, was considered absolutely feeble-minded,
who would remain in a prostrate position
when he fell on the floor, who could not when he fell on the floor, who could not talk, understand language or do anything

This afternoon thte boy read in a book named words as he picked slips out of a box, recited poems with gestures and acted with more intelligence than many children who have beeen considered normal from using movable pegs in a board, then a set of alphabet blocks and by object lessons guided by the diagnostic method which he has developed. Doctor Witmer began the training by

That the boy is one of the "fortunate few," however, was attested by the presence of five teachers and two nurses, who have been under the direction of Doctor Witmer in the child's training. The doctor refused to give the child's name.

ATHLETICS AT U. OF P.

The war will not interfere with the schedule of studies or athletic work at the University of Pehnsylvania, said Provost Edgar Fahs Smith today. The work will continue in the same way until the students who have enrolled shall be called to enlist, and if they are called in all probability the meniors will be graduated on the same plan as that carried out at the United States Military Academy.

Major William Kelly, who is in command of the military body, thoroughly agreed with the Provost and said the men should carry out the instructions of Major General Leonard Wood and stay at school until they are called to fight.

An order was issued today by the Provest to the effect that all men who are going in for athletics shall be compelled to enroll under Major Kelly. The number of students now taking the military course number 1500.
